JOHN JAMES SUICIDES IN COUNTY JAIL

VETERAN OF WORLD WAR HANGS SELF

Own Belt is Used as Instrument of Death; Died at 11 P. M. Thursday

FOUND BY TRUSTY

Is Second Suicide in Month in Jail

John James, aged 36, a World War veteran and well known resident of this city almost his entire life, committed suicide by hanging in his cell in the county jail late Thursday night. His body was found in the rear of his cell by Wesley Neff of Millport, a trusty, when the cells were opened at 7:30 a. m. Friday.

Neff, upon opening the cells, wondered why James did not come from his cell immediately as was his habit, and when he went to the cell door he saw the man hanging from the bars at the rear. James had used his own belt as the instrument of death. He tied the belt around the cell-bar then around his knees were only a few inches off the cement floor.

DEAD SINCE 11 P. M.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff was notified as soon as Neff found the body and Coroner C. E. Bowers was called. Bowers, upon investigation, reported that James had probably been dead since 10 or 11 p. m., Thursday.

Other prisoners on the second floor of the jail, where James died, said that at about 9 p. m., Thursday he asked to be locked in his cell. Neff locked him in and the other prisoners, Burl Hill, Clarence Easter and Charles Corder, sat up and talked until 10 p. m. Then retired without hearing any noise, thinking that James, possibly not feeling well, had gone to sleep for the night. He had eaten his supper and appeared in good spirit.

James had been in the county jail since Monday having been sentenced to serve a 10-day term and a fine of $100 and costs for contempt of court following divorce proceedings started by his wife. He was to have paid Mrs. James a sum of money for her support and for the support of a child. While in the courtroom, it is said, James asked permission to go to the bank to obtain the money. He did not return. Several days later he was arrested when he entered the courthouse, and was subsequently sentenced.

SERVED IN WAR

John James was a World war veteran enlisting here Oct. 6, 1917. He was a first class private in Company 'B, 308th Engineers to the time of his discharge. He trained at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, and fought in the Aisne-Marne, Oise-Aisne, Meuse-Argonne and Vesle sector battles. He was honorably discharged July 17, 1919.

He was born in Darbyville, May 30, 1895, the son of Charles and Elizabeth James. On April 10, 1914, he married Ella Heise, who, with a daughter Mary Elizabeth, survives. The mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Delgar, of Columbus, three half-sisters and one half-brother, all of Columbus, also survive.

Funeral arrangements in charge of M. S. Rinehart, have not been completed.

James' suicide is the second which has occurred in the Pickaway-co jail in less than one month. Squire C. E. Poulson, of Darby-twp, taking his own life on May 21.

Senate Has Three Problems to Decide Before It Can Leave

FUND BILL PASSES

Asks Enforcement Department Be Abolished

COLUMBUS, O., June 19—With only a cleanup of pending tax legislation hanging over its head the state legislature should be in a position to adjourn next week for certain, it was confidently predicted here today.

The senate having only to act upon the general appropriation bill, the sundry claim bill and to give concurrent an amendment made by the house of representatives on the motor vehicle bill has already fixed its adjournment date as next Wednesday.

VOTES APPROPRIATIVE

The house placed itself a step nearer a vacation last night when by a vote of 98 to 10 it passed the measure which would appropriat $120,250,000 to defray the cost of state governmental activities during the coming two years.

A lively contest preceeded the passage of the bill and defenders of the state prohibition department and of the Ohio "school of the air" were the vistors.

MOTION REFUSED

Representative James C. Foster, Republican of Cleveland argued bitterly to abolish the prohibition department and turn its funds to school and park but his motion was turned down. The house also tabled a motion by Representative Allen Corlett, Republican of East Cleveland, to do away with a dozen inspectors in the prohibition department.

The "school of the air" division of the department of education came nearer to being abolished. The house voted to do away with it and then reconsidered its action and restored all items in the dicision.

World's Busiest Traffic Points Are In Itinerary

On one of the busy days in Detroit The Herald special vacation party will travel by motor coach over Grand Boulevard, one of Detroit's famous parkways passing the world's two busiest traffic points and stopping at the General Motors and Fisher buildings.

The Fisher building is the latest contribution to art and engineering skill in the world. It is built with a central tower rising 26 stories, and two wings of 11 stories each. The entire structure is of singular beauty and when it is flooded with colored lights at night it looks like one of those dream castles that could be cracked and broken by a rough touch of life.

In part of this building is the Fisher theatre which is unique among the show houses of the country. Rich in barbaric splendor of Mayan architecture, it expresses some of the wealth that was in Yucatan 6,000 years ago.

You are invited to join The Herald special vacation party which leaves here July 6, for a six-day, all expense trip to Detroit and vicinity. Call The Herald by telephone or send in the convenient coupon which you will find in the paper today, for detailed information.

MINE LEADERS TO MEET WITH WHITE, BELIEF

Expect Conflicting Factions to be Called to Columbus Conference

SITUATION SERIOUS

Eight Are Injured In Thursday Fight

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., June 19.—With the coal strike area gripped by warfare which yesterday caused the injury of eight men, a request that Governor George White call a conference of conflicting factions in an attempt to reach peace today was planned by spokesmen for the United Mine Workers of America.

Plans for asking the governor to call an arbitration meeting of mine operators and union representatives, were drawn up by the United Mine Workers while officials of the rival union, the National Miners' Union, called other strikes.

Assured by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., one of the biggest producers in the strike area, that the U. M. A. will be recognized as spokesmen for employes in all its mines, John Cinque, a union official, appealed to other operators for a similar concession.

PICKETS HURT

Hit by a crowbar, one man injured in yesterday's disorders at the Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal Co., had to be taken to a hospital for treatment.

Seven others, all pickets, were hurt during a march on the mine which was halted by deputy sheriffs only by using tear bombs.

All the men injured in the pitched battle, which was staged on a hillside, were members of the National Miners' Union, it was said.

On the promise that they would create no disturbance, a crowd of several hundred strikers later were given permission to march by the Florence mine.

To see that the pledge was kept, a score of deputy sheriffs, armed with revolvers and tear bombs, patrolled the highway.

Two pickets who were charged with having attempted to attack Deputy Sheriff Joe Cosky at the Blaine mine of the Lorain Coal & Dock Co., were arrested and jailed.

MEETING HELD

A mass meeting was held at Bannock by the National Miners' Union in an attempt to increase interest in the strike, according to reports.

At that meeting, it was said, spokesmen for the union announced that a walkout would be declared today at the Provident mine.

As a result of the agreement reached by the U. M. W. and officials of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., a check-weighman was to be placed on duty at the Big Five mine today to assure miners their own representative in the weighing of coal which they remove from the workings.

HOOVER AFTER JOB OF ASHVILLE MAYOR

Sherman Hoover, Harrison-twp justice of the peace and World war veteran, is the first man to definitely declare himself for the office of mayor of the village of Ashville. The incumbent, S. D. Fridley, announced sometime ago that he would not be a candidate.

Eighteen men have been spoken of as candidates for the office however Hoover is the first to file his petition with the clerk of the board of elections.

Interest is also aroused in Ashville in the possibility of a spirited race for the office of marshall. Thus far about five men have been spoken of for the job.

OCEAN PLANE IS DAMAGED

Flight of Ruth Nichols Delayed While Landing Gear Is Repaired.

NEW YORK, June 19—Miss Ruth Nichols, society aviatrix of Rye, N. Y. planned today to hop off for Portland, Me., on the first leg of her proposed trans-Atlantic flight as soon as damage to her Lockheed-Veca plane is repaired.

The undercarriage of the plane was damaged yesterday in a rough landing at Floyd Bennett field. If repaires can be effected in time, she will hop off for Portland today. From Portland, Miss Nichols will fly to St. John's, N. B. thence to Harbor Grace, N. F., where she will refuel her plane and await favorable weather for her flight across the north Atlantic.

Pilots of two other planes here are awaiting improvement in Weather conditions before attempting a flight to Europe. Wiley Post and Harld Gatty are ready to hop off for Berlin on the first leg of a flight around the world, while Holger Harris and Otta Hillig, in another plane, have Copenhagen as their goal.

GASOLINE WAR AGAIN FLARES

Standard Oil Down One Cent, Crites Follows Suit; His Price Now 13 Cents.

A continuation of the 'gas war' which began some time ago in the south-end of the city is prevalent again, following another cut in the price of gasoline by H. M. Crites. Thursday, the Standard Oil Co. followed by other oil companies throughout the state cut the price of gas one cent, selling high test at 19 cents and low test at 16 cents. Mr. Crites followed suit and cut the price of gasoline at the S. Court-st station to 13 cents per gallon.

This is the second of 'gas price flareups' in the city. Some time ago Mr. Crites suddenly dropped the price of gas to 14 cents, while other stations in the city continued to sell at 17 cents.

At the present time Mr. Crites has a lawsuit against the Standard Oil Co. pending in common pleas court which is scheduled for hearing on July 6.

Almost every morning they are dispatched to a new scene in a telephone or telegraph order from Mathews.

Through an alliance with federal agents, who also have been forced to reduce activities because of limited funds, the two departments have been able to concentrate on important raids, according to Mathews.

While the department expects to take on renewed strength after new funds are available from the budget now being prepared by the state legislature, the May report shows convincingly, officials say, that Sears and Mathews have refused to allow a lack of money to reduce the effectiveness of the operatives.

Industrial Survey, Perspective of Foreign Tonnage To Be Probed.

Announcement has been made in Portsmouth that the Curfis Service Inc., of Cleveland has been awarded a contract to make a complete industrial survey showing the tonage fglaw and prespective of foreign tonnage that may be hauled over the proposed Portsmouth-Sandusky barge canal which will utilize the Sandusky and Scioto rivers, with a connecting canal between the rivers at the watershed.

The contract was awarded at a recent meeting of the Great Lakes and Ohio Riverway Association of which a number of local men are members. The meet was held at the Neil House in Columbus.

The survey to be conducted will be used to show the need of a barge canal from Portsmouth through Circleville and on to the Great Lakes.

World's Busiest Traffic Points Are In Itinerary

On one of the busy days in Detroit The Herald special vacation party will travel by motor coach over Grand Boulevard, one of Detroit's famous parkways, passing the world's two busiest traffic points and stopping at the General Motors and Fisher buildings.

The Fisher building is the latest contribution to art and engineering skill in the world. It is built with a central tower rising 26 stories, and two wings of 11 stories each. The entire structure is of singular beauty and when it is flooded with colored lights at night it looks like one of those dream castles that could be cracked and broken by a rough touch of life.

In part of this building is the Fisher theatre which is unique among the show houses of the country. Rich in barbaric splendor of Mayan architecture, it expresses some of the wealth that was in Yucatan 6,000 years ago.

You are invited to join The Herald special vacation party which leaves here July 6, for a six-day, all expense trip to Detroit and vicinity. Call The Herald by telephone or send in the convenient coupon which you will find in the paper today, for detailed information.

MINE LEADERS TO MEET WITH WHITE, BELIEF

Expect Conflicting Factions to be Called to Columbus Conference

SITUATION SERIOUS

Eight Are Injured In Thursday Fight

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., June 19.—With the coal strike area gripped by warfare which yesterday caused the injury of eight men, a request that Governor George White call a conference of conflicting factions in an attempt to reach peace today was planned by spokesmen for the United Mine Workers of America.

Plans for asking the governor to call an arbitration meeting of mine operators and union representatives, were drawn up by the United Mine Workers while officials of the rival union, the National Miners' Union, called other strikes.

Assured by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., one of the biggest producers in the strike area, that the U. M. A. will be recognized as spokesmen for employes in all its mines, John Cinque, a union official, appealed to other operators for a similar concession.

PICKETS HURT

Hit by a crowbar, one man injured in yesterday's disorders at the Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal Co., had to be taken to a hospital for treatment.

Seven others, all pickets, were hurt during a march on the mine which was halted by deputy sheriffs only by using tear bombs.

All the men injured in the pitched battle, which was staged on a hillside, were members of the National Miners' Union, it was said.

On the promise that they would create no disturbance, a crowd of several hundred strikers later were given permission to march by the Florence mine.

To see that the pledge was kept, a score of deputy sheriffs, armed with revolvers and tear bombs, patrolled the highway.

Two pickets who were charged with having attempted to attack Deputy Sheriff Joe Cosky at the Blaine mine of the Lorain Coal & Dock Co., were arrested and jailed.

MEETING HELD

A mass meeting was held at Bannock by the National Miners' Union in an attempt to increase interest in the strike, according to reports.

At that meeting, it was said, spokesmen for the union announced that a walkout would be declared today at the Provident mine.

As a result of the agreement reached by the U. M. W. and officials of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., a check-weighman was to be placed on duty at the Big Five mine today to assure miners their own representative in the weighing of coal which they remove from the workings.

HOOVER AFTER JOB OF ASHVILLE MAYOR

Sherman Hoover, Harrison-twp justice of the peace and World war veteran, is the first man to definitely declare himself for the office of mayor of the village of Ashville. The incumbent, S. D. Fridley, announced sometime ago that he would not be a candidate.

Eighteen men have been spoken of as candidates for the office however Hoover is the first to file his petition with the clerk of the board of elections.

Interest is also aroused in Ashville in the possibility of a spirited race for the office of marshall. Thus far about five men have been spoken of for the job.

FALLS FROM TREE, ARM IS FRACTURED

OCEAN PLANE IS DAMAGED

Flight of Ruth Nichols Delayed While Landing Gear Is Repaired.

NEW YORK, June 19—Miss Ruth Nichols, society aviatrix of Rye, N. Y. planned today to hop off for Portland, Me., on the first leg of her proposed trans-Atlantic flight as soon as damage to her Lockheed-Veca plane is repaired.

The undercarriage of the plane was damaged yesterday in a rough landing at Floyd Bennett field. If repaires can be effected in time, she will hop off for Portland today. From Portland, Miss Nichols will fly to St. John's, N. B. thence to Harbor Grace, N. F., where she will refuel her plane and await favorable weather for her flight across the north Atlantic.

Pilots of two other planes here are awaiting improvement in Weather conditions before attempting a flight to Europe. Wiley Post and Harld Gatty are ready to hop off for Berlin on the first leg of a flight around the world, while Holger Harris and Otta Hillig, in another plane, have Copenhagen as their goal.

GASOLINE WAR AGAIN FLARES

Standard Oil Down One Cent, Crites Follows Suit; His Price Now 13 Cents.

A continuation of the 'gas war' which began some time ago in the south-end of the city is prevalent again, following another cut in the price of gasoline by H. M. Crites. Thursday, the Standard Oil Co. followed by other oil companies throughout the state cut the price of gas one cent, selling high test at 19 cents and low test at 16 cents. Mr. Crites followed suit and cut the price of gasoline at the S. Court-st station to 13 cents per gallon.

This is the second of 'gas price flareups' in the city. Some time ago Mr. Crites suddenly dropped the price of gas to 14 cents, while other stations in the city continued to sell at 17 cents.

At the present time Mr. Crites has a lawsuit against the Standard Oil Co. pending in common pleas court which is scheduled for hearing on July 6.

FIREWORKS PLANT BLAST AT DAYTON

DAYTON, O., June 19—Shaking the entire city, a mysterious explosion today completely wrecked two buildings of the Dayton United Fireworks Manufacturing Co. plant, causing damage of $25,000.

A report louder than a severe clap of thunder resulted when explosives used in firecrackers and torpedoes went off.

SQUADRON OF "MINUTE-MEN" COVER STATE

Lower Funds for Enforcement in Sears' Department Cause Action

TWO WORKED HERE

Report of Activities Pleases White

COLUMBUS, O., June 19.—Absolutely the newest wrinkle in bootlegger-catching — a "flying squadron" of four minute-men prohibition inspectors—has seriously increased the hazards of the liquor business in Ohio, a report by Assistant Prohibition Commissioner E. G. Mathews to Governor George White disclosed today.

Hitting where it hurts the most—at bootlegger-room's pocketbook—four "ace" raiders who dart swiftly about the state, striking here today and there tomorrow, helped boost liquor fines in May by more than $25,000, the report revealed.

VIGILANCE SHOWN

New vigilance and efficiency apparently displayed in the summary of May's activities particularly pleased Governor George White and his immediate political family because the strides were made while the prohibition department was operating under the handicap of reduced funds.

The squad started "flying" about the state in a department-owned automobile when Mathews and his chief, Prohibition Commissioner Clarence D. Sears, discovered that money for enforcement purposes was almost exhausted and at least 14 inspectors would have to be given indefinite vacations without pay.

Aided rather than hurt by the new system, the department in May increased its effectiveness over the previous month in every line of its duties, according to the reports.

Fines jumped from $42,445 in April to $78,798 in May under the operating plan devised by Sears and Mathews.

By the end of May the total number of stills seized was 692, or almost as many as were confiscated during the entire year in 1930, department statistics showed.

Noticeable increases in arrests and convictions also resulted in May despite the fact that the department was seriously crippled by a lack of men.

Wholesale raids in Toledo, Fostoria, Findlay, Mount Vernon, Washington C. H., and Columbus, put a score or more of bootleggers out of business, Mathews indicated.

BAYNHAM CHIEF

George Baynham, the giant inspector whose build and gait is recognized by bootleggers all over the state, and Mike Poyma, Charles Boudet and B. F. Howard constitute the "flying squadron."

Almost every morning they are dispatched to a new scene in a telephone or telegraph order from Mathews.

Through an alliance with federal agents, who also have been forced to reduce activities because of limited funds, the two departments have been able to concentrate on important raids, according to Mathews.

While the department expects to take on renewed strength after new funds are available from the budget now being prepared by the state legislature, the May report shows convincingly, officials said, that Sears and Mathews have refused to allow a lack of money to reduce the effectiveness of their operatives.

BAYNHAM WORKED HERE

Two members of the flying squad, including its leader, George Baynham worked here last Saturday arresting John Moore, this city, and George Reeves, Perry-twp.

The men were here for the raids and hearings and departed at once.

OHIO GOVERNMENT OPERATING COST IS REPORTED AS LOW

COLUMBUS O.—The state government spent $467,000 less per month in April and May than in the first three months of the year during which its disbursements were swelled by payment of incumbrances it inherited from the preceding administration, Howard L. Bevis, director of finance, reported today.

Expenditures in January, February and March totalled $12,633,000, an average of $4,211,000 per month. The total for April and May was $7,489,000, an average of $3,744,500 per month and a reduction of $467,000 per month

Approximately 32 cents out of every dollar expended in the first three months of 1931 went to pay obligations hanging over from 1930 In the first five months the new administration has paid $4,952,776 to settle debts incurred by former officials There remain bills and contracts totalling $2,109 000 unpaid when they came into office which the present officials must pay

In addition there was left unpaid at the beginning of the present administration $150,000 for relief of weak school districts And to this must be added a considerable sum for payment of sundry claims accrued prior to 1931.

Reductions are being accomplished in administrative expenditures and other controllable items in accordance with the economy aims of Governor George White Director Bevis announced. Administrative costs alone show a decrease from $2,793,509 for the first five months of 1930 to $2,567 435 for the first five months of 1931, a difference of $226,073 Expenditures of boards and commissions were reduced from $377,363 for the first five months of 1930 to $233,536 for the first five months of 1931, a cut of $143,826

Principal increases are accounted for by educational fuctions provided for by legislative appropriation and not within control of the finance director; welfare and penal institution requirements, salaries and expenses of the legislative which was not in session in 1930.

Total incumbrances outstanding Dec. 31, were $7,211,935. On May 31 outstanding incumbrances had been reduced to $3,971,391 which includes $2,259,159 carried over from 1930

"We are encouraged by the decrease of $467,000 a month in April and May to feel that we can show further reductions from month to month in those costs that are within our control," Director Bevis said. "We will keep uncontrolable expenditures at a proper minimum and in the field of controllabel costs reduce personnel and maintenance outlay wherever it can be done without sacrifice of necessary service."

SIPLE TO ATTEND CAMP OF SCOUTS

Paul Siple, Eagle Scout, who travelled to the South Pole with Admiral Byrd, will spend Wednesday, June 24, at Camp Lazarus, where he will be entertained by Scouts of central Ohio It is expected that many parents of boys, and boys who are not in camp will take advantage of the opportunity to visit Camp Lazarus to see and hear Paul Siple as he tells of his adventures on the Antarctic ice.

Siple was in charge of the dog teams, the collection of scientific specimens and taking of soundings for the expedition. He is one of the few who has spent six months of sunlight followed by six months of night.

There will be no charge for visitors coming to Camp Lazarus on June 24th. Meals may be obtained if reservation is made in advance at Scout Headquarters, 44 East Broad-st, Columbus, Ohio.

National policy may ofter fall below, but it cannot rise above the national ideal.

FAYETTE-CO'S PAVING WORK IN PROGRESS

Two Shifts Being Employed On C. C. C. Road—Other Highway News.

WASHINGTON, C. H., (Special)—At the present time two shifts are being employed in laying concrete on the CCC highway between Madison Mills and Mt. Sterling, and as a result the 20-foot slab of concrete was pushed forward 1,300 feet Wednesday, the mixer being kept in operation from 4 30 in the morning until 8-30 at night, with employment given to double the usual force handling the concrete end of the job

So far more than a mile of the paving has been laid on this road, and the work is being pushed on rapidly that it should be completed far in advance of the time fixed for its completion, instead of sometime after the date, as is frequently the case in road work.

Resident Engineer Frank W. Turner, who has been having his hands full in connection with the several projects under way in this county, stated Thursday that the Madison Mills intersection is now open to the public, the barriers having been removed Wednesday night.

ON ROUTE 38

Next Monday, if present plans are carried out, route 38 will be closed just west of this city to the Anderson road, and the work of tearing up the present road where it connects with the brick west of this city, will get under way.

The road has been closed from the Anderson road south, and the road torn up to a point near the Hyer stone quarry, from which part of the stone is being obtained to build the road. By beginning on this end of the road, the present road will be utilized for hauling stone from the Hyer quarry until most of the mileage this side of the quarry has been laid.

Rapid headway is being made on the widening process on the south end of the route 38 job

PLAN U. S. MARKERS

Men engaged in obtaining the information necessary for having the new U. S. markers made for federal routes 68 and 22, both of which pass through this city, were through this county Wednesday, and the markers will be made and ready to be installed within the next few weeks, it is indicated.

Route 68 is an extension from Maysville, Ky., through Hillsboro, and thence northward over the CCC as far as Erie, Pa

Route 22, the other federal route to touch this city, extends from Pittsburgh to Cambridge, over the National highway to Zanesville, thence over route 10 through Lancaster and Circleville in this city, and over the CCC into Cincinnati.

SEES HEAVY TRAFFIC

Resident Engineer Turner is of the opinion that with the federalization of route 10 and the CCC to Cincinnati, that this will become a much more important route than many anticipate, and may carry the heaviest traffic of any route through the city, particularly after the present improvements under way and scheduled are completed

TO REBUILD 22 SECTION

Friday of this week bids will be opened for the widening of U. S Route 22 for state route 10 from the corporation line of New Holland, eastward for a distance of 4 86 miles, by tarbound construction or concrete widening the present roadbed not to be disturbed except to widen it to 20 feet instead of 14 or 16 at the present time The improvement is estimated at $37,710.

BRIDGE NEARLY DONE

The bridge over Sugar creek on route 70, six miles south of this city, is nearing completion. The last slab of the bridge is to be poured Friday of this week and the structure, of concrete, will be one of the most attractive structures in the county The work of building the approaches and paving a section of the road at each end, will be pushed forward in the near future, and it is expected that the job will be finished ahead of schedule. The road is still open at that point

OTHER ROAD NOTES

The relocation of the road between Mt. Sterling and Era, with the overhead crossing of the railroad, is nearly finished, pouring of a slab of the overhead bridge at the railroad to be completed this week, and after finishing touches are applied elsewhere and the cement cures properly, the road will be thrown open to traffic

Resident Engineer Turner is keeping a careful eye on all material entering into the various road jobs within his jurisdiction, and recently condemned ten car loads of material shipped in on one of the jobs.

The several road jobs in Fayette-co. are affording employment to a large number of persons who reside in the county, and the work will continue until late summer or into the fall months.

SENATORS PROTEST HIGHER RAIL RATE

WASHINGTON—The plea of American railroads for a fifteen per cent increase in rate brought a wave of protest today from senators, who charged it would prostrate business, prevent recovery from the depression and increase human suffering.

The carriers' petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission was characterized as "suicidal" and "unwise" by senators, who declared existing rates were a burden on business. Senatorial sentiment rather favored a decrease in the present rate schedules, as a means of bringing a quicker business recovery

The only defense of the railroads was made by Senator Dale (R) of Vermont, who declared "something must be done to help the railroads because they are in financial straits." Dale added that "if the rates were increased, as asked, I don't know what the effect will be on business" He declared the petition was one which the commission would study at great length before reaching a decision

Senators Caraway (D) of Arkansas, and King (D) of Utah, viewed the request with much disfavor

"Tho think of granting an increase in freight rates at this time is very unwise," said King "It would hurt business, hurt the merchant, hurt the farmer and increase the cost of living at a time when millions of citizens are trying to get enough to eat I don't see how the government could undertake such an unwise thing at this time"

Caraway declared it would be "suicidal" to increase transportation costs during the depression

"The railroads are in the same fix as the rest of us," said Caraway. "They are feeling the effects of Hoover prosperity, but in as much as relief has been denied to all other classes of citizens there is no reason for the government granting them relief.

"Seriously, I know agriculture cannot stand any increase in transportation costs Millions of dollars of agricultural products are rotting in the fields because the farmers can't pay the charges asked by the railroads for transporting them to the markets It would be suicidal both for the railroads and for agriculture to increase their present rates now."

An administration senator, who did not wish to have his name used declared the railroads had brought on their present plight by refusing to recognize the competition of truck and bus lines

"The railroads are hurt by truck and bus competition, due to their own arbitrary policies," he explained "They should have been farsighted enough to initiate truck and bus lines as an auxiliary service to their rail transportation These two services should be cooperating instead of competing If the railroad rates are increased, the carriers will get no relief—they will only drive more business from the rails to the trucks and busses"

CALIFORNIA'S FORESTS

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—More than 16,000,000 persons visited California's national forests during 1920. Of that number 5,000,000 visited the Angeles National Forest county, according to a survey California forests attracted more than half the entire number of persons who visited the 151 national forests throughout the country During the last year the forestry service has added hundreds of miles of forest roads and trails to its system and has developed free public camps and picnic grounds provided with sanitary facilities

Expenditures of boards and commissions were reduced from $377,363 for the first five months of 1930 to $233,536 for the first five months of 1931, a cut of $143,826.

Principal increases are accounted for by educational fuctions provided for by legislative appropriation and not within control of the finance director; welfare and penal institution requirements; salaries and expenses of the legislative which was not in session in 1930.

Total incumbrances outstanding Dec. 31, were $7,211,935. On May 31 outstanding incumbrances had been reduced to $3,971,391 which includes $2,259,159 carried over from 1930.

"We are encouraged by the decrease of $467,000 a month in April and May to feel that we can show further reductions from month to month in those costs that are within our control," Director Bevis said. "We will keep uncontrolable expenditures at a proper minimum and in the field of controllabel costs reduce personnel and maintenance outlay wherever it can be done without sacrifice of necessary service."

SIPLE TO ATTEND CAMP OF SCOUTS

Paul Siple, Eagle Scout, who travelled to the South Pole with Admiral Byrd, will spend Wednesday, June 24, at Camp Lazarus, where he will be entertained by Scouts of central Ohio. It is expected that many parents of boys, and boys who are not in camp will take advantage of the opportunity to visit Camp Lazarus to see and hear Paul Siple as he tells of his adventures on the Antarctic ice.

Siple was in charge of the dog teams, the collection of scientific specimens and taking of soundings for the expedition. He is one of the few who has spent six months of sunlight followed by six months of night.

There will be no charge for visitors coming to Camp Lazarus on June 24th. Meals may be obtained if reservation is made in advance at Scout Headquarters, 44 East Broad-st, Columbus, Ohio.

FAYETTE-CO'S PAVING WORK IN PROGRESS

Two Shifts Being Employed On C. C. C. Road—Other Highway News.

WASHINGTON, C. H., (Special)—At the present time two shifts are being employed in laying concrete on the CCC highway between Madison Mills and Mt. Sterling, and as a result the 20-foot slab of concrete was pushed forward 1,300 feet Wednesday, the mixer being kept in operation from 4:30 in the morning until 8:30 at night, with employment given to double the usual force handling the concrete end of the job.

So far more than a mile of the paving has been laid on this road, and the work is being pushed on rapidly that it should be completed far in advance of the time fixed for its completion, instead of sometime after the date, as is frequently the case in road work.

Resident Engineer Frank W. Turner, who has been having his hands full in connection with the several projects under way in this county, stated Thursday that the Madison Mills intersection is now open to the public, the barriers having been removed Wednesday night.

ON ROUTE 38

Next Monday, if present plans are carried out, route 38 will be closed just west of this city to the Anderson road, and the work of tearing up the present road where it connects with the brick west of this city, will get under way.

The road has been closed from the Anderson road south, and the road torn up to a point near the Hyer stone quarry, from which part of the stone is being obtained to build the road. By beginning on this end of the road, the present road will be utilized for hauling stone from the Hyer quarry until most of the mileage this side of the quarry has been laid.

Rapid headway is being made on the widening process on the south end of the route 38 job.

PLAN U. S. MARKERS

Men engaged in obtaining the information necessary for having the new U. S. markers made for federal routes 68 and 22, both of which pass through this city, were through this county Wednesday, and the markers will be made and ready to be installed within the next few weeks, it is indicated.

Route 68 is an extension from Maysville, Ky., through Hillsboro, and thence northward over the CCC as far as Erie, Pa.

Route 22, the other federal route to touch this city, extends from Pittsburgh to Cambridge, over the National highway to Zanesville, thence over route 10 through Lancaster and Circleville in this city, and over the CCC into Cincinnati.

SEES HEAVY TRAFFIC

Resident Engineer Turner is of the opinion that with the federalization of route 10 and the CCC to Cincinnati, that this will become a much more important route than many anticipate, and may carry the heaviest traffic of any route through the city, particularly after the present improvements under way and scheduled are completed.

TO REBUILD 22 SECTION

Friday of this week bids will be opened for the widening of U. S. Route 22 for state route 10 from the corporation line of New Holland, eastward for a distance of 4.86 miles, by tarbound construction or concrete widening the present roadbed not to be disturbed except to widen it to 20 feet instead of 14 or 16 at the present time. The improvement is estimated at $37,710.

BRIDGE NEARLY DONE

The bridge over Sugar creek on route 70, six miles south of this city, is nearing completion. The last slab of the bridge is to be poured Friday of this week and the structure, of concrete, will be one of the most attractive structures in the county. The work of building the approaches and paving a section of the road at each end, will be pushed forward in the near future, and it is expected that the job will be finished ahead of schedule. The road is still open at that point.

OTHER ROAD NOTES

The relocation of the road between Mt. Sterling and Era, with the overhead crossing of the railroad, is nearly finished, pouring of a slab of the overhead bridge at the railroad to be completed this week, and after finishing touches are applied elsewhere and the cement cures properly, the road will be thrown open to traffic.

Resident Engineer Turner is keeping a careful eye on all material entering into the various road jobs within his jurisdiction, and recently condemned ten car loads of material shipped in on one of the jobs.

The several road jobs in Fayette-co are affording employment to a large number of persons who reside in the county, and the work will continue until late summer or into the fall months.

SENATORS PROTEST HIGHER RAIL RATE

WASHINGTON.—The plea of American railroads for a fifteen per cent increase in rate brought a wave of protest today from senators, who charged it would prostrate business, prevent recovery from the depression and increase human suffering.

The carriers' petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission was characterized as "suicidal" and "unwise" by senators, who declared existing rates were a burden on business. Senatorial sentiment rather favored a decrease in the present rate schedules, as a means of bringing a quicker business recovery.

The only defense of the railroads was made by Senator Dale (R) of Vermont, who declared "something must be done to help the railroads because they are in financial straits." Dale added that "if the rates were increased, as asked, I don't know what the effect will be on business." He declared the petition was one which the commission would study at great length before reaching a decision.

Senators Caraway (D) of Arkansas, and King (D) of Utah, viewed the request with much disfavor.

"Tho think of granting an increase in freight rates at this time is very unwise," said King. "It would hurt business, hurt the merchant, hurt the farmer and increase the cost of living at a time when millions of citizens are trying to get enough to eat. I don't see how the government could undertake such an unwise thing at this time."

Caraway declared it would be "suicidal" to increase transportation costs during the depression.

"The railroads are in the same fix as the rest of us," said Caraway. "They are feeling the effects of Hoover prosperity, but in as much as relief has been denied to all other classes of citizens there is no reason for the government granting them relief.

"Seriously, I know agriculture cannot stand any increase in transportation costs. Millions of dollars of agricultural products are rotting in the fields because the farmers can't pay the charges asked by the railroads for transporting them to the markets. It would be suicidal both for the railroads and for agriculture to increase their present rates now."

An administration senator, who did not wish to have his name used declared the railroads had brought on their present plight by refusing to recognize the competition of truck and bus lines.

"The railroads are hurt by truck and bus competition, due to their own arbitrary policies," he explained. "They should have been farsighted enough to initiate truck and bus lines as an auxiliary service to their rail transportation. These two services should be cooperating instead of competing. If the railroad rates are increased, the carriers will get no relief—they will only drive more business from the rails to the trucks and busses."

CALIFORNIA'S FORESTS

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—More than 16,000,000 persons visited California's national forests during 1920. Of that number 5,000,000 visited the Angeles National Forest county, according to a survey. California forests attracted more than half the entire number of persons who visited the 151 national forests throughout the country. During the last year the forestry service has added hundreds of miles of forest roads and trails to its system and has developed free public camps and picnic grounds provided with sanitary facilities.

A green or yellow vegetable.

Milk for all.

Two to four times a week,

Tomatoes for all.

Dried beans and peas or peanuts.

Eggs (especially for children).

Lean meat ,fish of poultry, or cheese.

The vegetable plate is always a pleasant variation in the diet but right now it begins to take on an added importance because local produce is moving to market in increasing quantities and varieties. This means lower priced vegetables for, although fresh vegetables are always on sale in large cities and most towns ,the price may be beyound the reach of families who need to economize on their food.

Potatoes in some form or other are the mainstay of most meals and the vegetable dinner is no exception. The way in which the potatoes are prepared depends largely on the manner in which the other vegetables are to be served. The accompanying menu, prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S Department of Agriculture, illustrates how to take advantage of the oven for the dinner meal. Since scalloped tomatoes with salt pork are to be served the potatoes are baked. Graham muffins are appetizing with this particular dinner and they can bake at the same time.

The other vegetable is spinach, chosen not only for its great food value but also because it is especially cheap now. A poached egg is served on the spinach, which should be chopped fine, seasoned and formed into a nest. The egg is an inexpensive but worthwhile addition to a vegetable plate, the bureau points out. It supplies the necessary protein which most vegetables lack.

Aside from the flavor, color, and variety which vegetables bring to a meal and which in themselves are important, they are regarded from the standpoint of nutrition as excellent sources of minerals and vitamins. The minerals belong to a group of substances which regulate the functions of the body and help to build tissues. Throughout life and particularly so during the growing period the minerals are essential to good helth. Calcium, phosphorus, and iron are some of the minerals that are found in vegetables and which are most likely to be lacking in the average American diet.

Some adults have to acquire a taste for certain vegetables. "It is hard to teach an old dog new tricks," but comparatively easy to teach the young child to like all vegetables.

A four months old baby can have strained vegetable soup and two or three months later a thicker soup Then sieved vegetables can follow. In this way a child learns to like the various vegetable flavors before his taste is highly developed and while his food habits are being formed.

The aim in cooking vegetables should be to increase their palatability, retaining as much of the natural flavor, texture, and food value as is possible. In their natural colors and shades vegetables look appetizing. Improper cooking, unfortunately may often change their whole appearance. Green vegetables, for instance, turn brown if cooked. This can be avoided by cooking with the lid off and for a shorter time.

With spinach and other greens add no water other than that which clings to the leaves after washing. The bureau decries the practice of putting a pinch of baking soda in the vegetable water to keep the color. This destroys the vitamins and tends to soften the vegetable and make it mushy. The green color will be retined if the bureau's recommendation of the open kittle and quick cooking method is followed.

Red vegetables, like beets and red cabbage, tend to bleed but unlike the green ones, acid helps to hold the color while an alkali causes it to fade. Yellow skinned onions, white cabbage, turnips, and celery, though almost colorless before heating, turn yellow in the presence of alkaline water. Overcooking causes them to darken. The true yellow vegetables like carrots, squash, pumpkin, and rutabagas are stable in color and are affected neither by acid nor alkali.

All vegetables soften more or less in cooking But they should be cooked only long enough to become tender so they will keep as much of their original texture as possible The time varies with the vegetable and the method, but, as a rule, vegetables require much less cooking than they get. The bureau suggests that one reason some children dislike spinach is that it is too often cooked to a mush so that all chewiness has disappeared

Serve vegetables as soon as they are cooked. If it is necessary for them to stand for a time they should be removed from the water, no matter how small a quantity, and reheated quickly just before serving.

RECIPES

Scalloped Tomatoes

1 No. 3 can tomatoes
1-2 cup finely diced salt pork.
Salt.
1 tablespoon chopped onion.
1 cup dry bread crumbs.
Pepper.

Boil the tomatoes and onions about 10 minutes. Cook the salt pork until brown and crisp. Remove the pork and add the bread crumbs to the fat. Stir until well mixed. Mix the tomatoes and salt pork and season with salt and pepper to taste. Put a layer of the crumbs into greased baking dish and pour in the tomatoes, and cover with the remaining crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown. Serve in the dish.

Graham Muffins

1 1-2 cups unsifted graham flour,
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
1 egg.
1 cup milk.
1 tablespoon melted fat.

Mix all the dry ingredients thoroughly. Beat the egg slightly, add the milk, and stir with the fat into the dry ingredients. Do not stir the muffin batter any more than necessary. Bake in greased muffin pans for 25 to 30 minutes in a hot oven (400 to 425F).

'GRUNT CARD' IS SUCCESS

Nice Crowd Witnesses Much Action at Everts Arena Thursday Evening.

A wrestling card that really was just that was dished out to a nice crowd of 'grunt' fans at Everts arena Thursday evening As far as the crowd is concerned that witnessed the matches, wrestling is here too stay, for action and plenty of it was the order of the evening

The excitement started in the first preliminary when Ham Riley battled a red-haired lad from Washington C. H. for 10 minutes. Neither obtained a fall although the referee, Gypsy Joe, awarded the scrap to the Washington C. H. youth.

Then came more action when Ray Slagle and Hans Muir of Columbus tangled Muir tossed Slagle with a head- scissors after 25 minutes of wrestling

The next bout, the feature go of the evening, saw Gypsy Joe of Columbus, put the 'wolks' to Ray Dixon, a rough and tough battler, in the last two falls after dropping the first. Dixon succeeded in putting more holds on Joe than the Gypsy lad did on him, but Joe's ability to break them was amazing.

Dixon won the first fall in 48 minutes with a head scissors

It required only two minutes for the second fall, when Gypsy Joe applied a back-slam to his opponent. Dixon was hurt considerably but came back for the third fall. The men wrestled for 12 minutes before Joe tossed Dixon hard with an airplane smash.

The last bout was between Ray Phillips and Bull Marshall, the latter from this city. Phillips was to have fought Wayne Dunkle of London, but the latter got out of a sick bed to come here for an appearance. Marshall substituted for him. These two men, both plenty tough, were crowd-pleasers and once after rolling out of the ring continued to wrestle. The referee called the match a draw much to the satisfaction of the crowd.

More wrestling shows would certainly be popular for a nice crowd saw Thursday's bouts.

White Rules For Evening; Trains Are Coming Back

PARIS.—White nights are the rule in Paris this spring and summer and we don't mean nighties, either .

There seems to be no giving up of white for fashionable evening wear although it has had a long run of favor. White satin, peaulde soie or some thin white crepe are largely used, besides any number of crisp white organdies, polka-dotted Swiss, etc.

Madeleine Vionnet is using a supple white crepe satin which frankly reveals the curved lines which are all in the swim these days and which mean a careful watching of one's diet, for one must have neither angles nor fleshy curves.

Cheruit uses a heavier white satin for a very smart white gown with some of this designer's characteristic side pannier drapery and a trailing train in back. Trains, by the way, seem to be very much back for the moment, and any number of them can be seen on any smart dance-floor these evenings, held up smartly by pretty young women as if they had been holding up trains most of their young lives.

Patou uses lustrous white satin for one of his newest long evening coats that are sure to be worn next autumn and winter. It is slim and slinky with the closing slightly cut away in curves toward the hem, while the back touches the floor. The wide drap-

Department of Agriculture, illustrates how to take advantage of the oven for the dinner meal. Since scalloped tomatoes with salt pork are to be served the potatoes are baked. Graham muffins are appetizing with this particular dinner and they can bake at the same time.

The other vegetable is spinach, chosen not only for its great food value but also because it is especially cheap now. A poached egg is served on the spinach, which should be chopped fine, seasoned and formed into a nest. The egg is an inexpensive but worthwhile addition to a vegetable plate, the bureau points out. It supplies the necessary protein which most vegetables lack.

Aside from the flavor, color, and variety which vegetables bring to a meal and which in themselves are important, they are regarded from the standpoint of nutrition as excellent sources of minerals and vitamins. The minerals belong to a group of substances which regulate the functions of the body and help to build tissues. Throughout life and particularly so during the growing period the minerals are essential to good helth. Calcium, phosphorus, and iron are some of the minerals that are found in vegetables and which are most likely to be lacking in the average American diet.

Some adults have to acquire a taste for certain vegetables. "It is hard to teach an old dog new tricks," but comparatively easy to teach the young child to like all vegetables.

A four months old baby can have strained vegetable soup and two or three months later a thicker soup. Then sieved vegetables can follow. In this way a child learns to like the various vegetable flavors before his taste is highly developed and while his food habits are being formed.

The aim in cooking vegetables should be to increase their palatability, retaining as much of the natural flavor, texture, and food value as is possible. In their natural colors and shades vegetables look appetizing. Improper cooking, unfortunately may often change their whole appearance. Green vegetables, for instance, turn brown if cooked. This can be avoided by cooking with the lid off and for a shorter time.

With spinach and other greens add no water other than that which clings to the leaves after washing. The bureau decries the practice of putting a pinch of baking soda in the vegetable water to keep the color. This destroys the vitamins and tends to soften the vegetable and make it mushy. The green color will be retined if the bureau's recommendation of the open kittle and quick cooking method is followed.

Red vegetables, like beets and red cabbage, tend to bleed but unlike the green ones, acid helps to hold the color while an alkali causes it to fade. Yellow skinned onions, white cabbage, turnips, and celery, though almost colorless before heating, turn yellow in the presence of alkaline water. Overcooking causes them to darken. The true yellow vegetables like carrots, squash, pumpkin, and rutabagas are stable in color and are affected neither by acid nor alkali.

All vegetables soften more or less in cooking. But they should be cooked only long enough to become tender so they will keep as much of their original texture as possible. The time varies with the vegetable and the method, but, as a rule, vegetables require much less cooking than they get. The bureau suggests that one reason some children dislike spinach is that it is too often cooked to a mush so that all chewiness has disappeared.

Serve vegetables as soon as they are cooked. If it is necessary for them to stand for a time they should be removed from the water, no matter how small a quantity, and reheated quickly just before serving.

Dinner

Vegetable plate with poached egg, scalloped tomatoes with salt pork, seasoned spinich, chopped fine, baked potatoes, graham muffins, iced tea (adults), milk (children).

Supper

Creamed chipped beef, toasted muffins fresh strawberries, milk for all.

RECIPES

Scalloped Tomatoes

1 No. 3 can tomatoes.
1-2 cup finely diced salt pork.
Salt.
1 tablespoon chopped onion.
1 cup dry bread crumbs.
Pepper.

Boil the tomatoes and onions about 10 minutes. Cook the salt pork until brown and crisp. Remove the pork and add the bread crumbs to the fat. Stir until well mixed. Mix the tomatoes and salt pork and season with salt and pepper to taste. Put a layer of the crumbs into greased baking dish and pour in the tomatoes, and cover with the remaining crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown. Serve in the dish.

Graham Muffins

1 1-2 cups unsifted graham flour,
2 teaspoons baking powder.
1 tablespoon sugar.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
1 egg.
1 cup milk.
1 tablespoon melted fat.

Mix all the dry ingredients thoroughly. Beat the egg slightly, add the milk, and stir with the fat into the dry ingredients. Do not stir the muffin batter any more than necessary. Bake in greased muffin pans for 25 to 30 minutes in a hot oven (400 to 425F).

'GRUNT CARD' IS SUCCESS

Nice Crowd Witnesses Much Action at Everts Arena Thursday Evening.

A wrestling card that really was just that was dished out to a nice crowd of 'grunt' fans at Everts arena Thursday evening. As far as the crowd is concerned that witnessed the matches, wrestling is here too stay, for action and plenty of it was the order of the evening.

The excitement started in the first preliminary when Ham Riley battled a red-haired lad from Washington C. H. for 10 minutes. Neither obtained a fall although the referee, Gypsy Joe, awarded the scrap to the Washington C. H. youth.

Then came more action when Ray Slagle and Hans Muir of Columbus tangled. Muir tossed Slagle with a head- scissors after 25 minutes of wrestling.

The next bout, the feature go of the evening, saw Gypsy Joe of Columbus, put the 'woiks' to Ray Dixon, a rough and tough battler, in the last two falls after dropping the first. Dixon succeeded in putting more holds on Joe than the Gypsy lad did on him, but Joe's ability to break them was amazing.

Dixon won the first fall in 48 minutes with a head scissors.

It required only two minutes for the second fall, when Gypsy Joe applied a back-slam to his opponent. Dixon was hurt considerably but came back for the third fall. The men wrestled for 12 minutes before Joe tossed Dixon hard with an airplane smash.

The last bout was between Ray Phillips and Bull Marshall, the latter from this city. Phillips was to have fought Wayne Dunkle of London, but the latter got out of a sick bed to come here for an appearance. Marshall substituted for him. These two men, both plenty tough, were crowd-pleasers and once after rolling out of the ring continued to wrestle. The referee called the match a draw much to the satisfaction of the crowd.

More wrestling shows would certainly be popular for a nice crowd saw Thursday's bouts.

White Rules For Evening; Trains Are Coming Back

PARIS.—White nights are the rule in Paris this spring and summer and we don't mean nighties, either .

There seems to be no giving up of white for fashionable evening wear although it has had a long run of favor. White satin, peault de soie or some thin white crepe are largely used, besides any number of crisp white organdies, polka-dotted Swiss, etc.

Madeleine Vionnet is using a supple white crepe satin which frankly reveals the curved lines which are all in the swim these days and which mean a careful watching of one's diet, for one must have neither angles nor fleshy curves.

Cheruit uses a heavier white satin for a very smart white gown with some of this designer's characteristic side pannier drapery and a trailing train in back. Trains, by the way, seem to be very much back for the moment, and any number of them can be seen on any smart dance-floor these evenings, held up smartly by pretty young women as if they had been holding up trains most of their young lives.

Patou uses lustrous white satin for one of his newest long evening coats that are sure to be worn next autumn and winter. It is slim and slinky with the closing slightly cut away in curves toward the hem, while the back touches the floor. The wide draped collar is bordered with sable and there are short puffed sleeves cuffed with the same fur.

Evening slippers may match the frock when it is white, or the jewelry. Toeless sandals are much in evidence but pumps are still prominent. Evening stockings are usually a sunburn-beige with white gowns.

WASHINGTON C. H. GOLFERS TRIUMPH

Washington C. M. golfers triumphed in an easy victory over their guests from London at the Washington Country Club Wednesday by the score of 54 1-2 to 5 1-2.

Circleville and Washington golfers split even in two matches played last year. Both teams were victorious on their home course.

Another Wickersham Dud

FOR the reason they contained nothing not already generally known, the latest findings of the Wickersham crime commission have attracted little public attention. They were not controversial in nature, nor did they suggest workable remedies for the conditions cited.

Emphasis was placed in the part politics plays in the selection of federal and state prosecuting attorneys, but the facts are not new. The people have known them for years and have seemed to be indifferent save when some scandal more serious or sensational than usual has exaggerated the real state of affairs

The commission sees much evil in the fact that the prosecutor's office, "with its enormous power of preventing prosecutions from getting to trial, its lack of organization, its freedom from central control and its ill-defined responsibilities," is a great political prize

Perhaps in the large cities conditions are as bad as the commission charges, but few persons will believe that prosecuting attorneys in the smaller counties and the more rural federal districts free many offenders for political reasons. It is true that only 4.7 percent of the felony cases in New York and Chicago reach a jury, but the commission certainly does not impute to the political machinations of prosecuting attorneys the dismissal of the other 95 3 per cent.

The district attorneyship is a political prize only where there is government for and by the bootleggers. Where the racketeers control the office they can ply their illegitimate trade with immunity from penal punishment for themselves and with the assurance that their competitors will be "justly dealt with according to law"

Business and Sentiment

ACCORDING to a popular notion 'there is no sentiment in business" because, like oil and water, sentiment and business will not mix. But there is, nevertheless a great deal of sentiment in business You may recognize the truth of this by observing people's reactions to news of business failures.

Genuine sympathy is felt for the honest man compelled to go into bankruptcy. Such a one has friends eager to help him out of his trouble. Often they extend his credit, accept settlements that leave him in a position to make a fresh start and contribute as they can toward the success of the new start. Knowing him to be honest, his equally honest fellows recognize him as an asset to the business world. There is always real rejoicing at the "come back" of an honest man and not merely because his triumphing over adversity means that he will pay off old scores.

There is nothing more pathetic than an honest business failure. On the other hand, what is more despicable than a failure brought about by dishonest practices and leaving a train of despoiled victims with confidence in their fellows shattered? This sort of failure does more harm than can be calculated from any statement of losses sustained by those who put trust in the untrustworthy It hurts honest people For public protection there should be no mercy extended to those who make dishonest failures

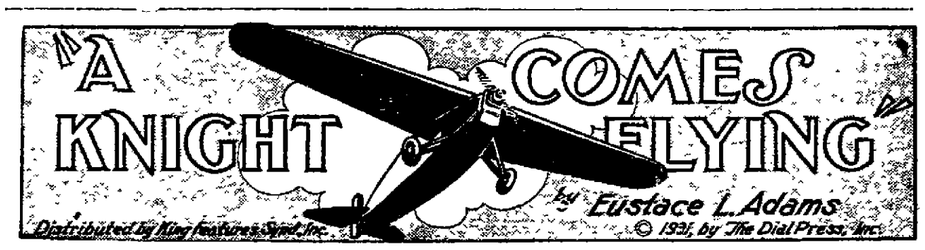
Digging Into Words

IF you just sit and look at one printed word for a little while it will seem to jump at you and the real peculiarity of its pronunciation, its meaning and its fitness will be impressed on your mind as never before Plate leather leaf dance—why were those words chosen to mean exactly what they do mean?

Of course when we were children, we used to be told that the word zebra was inserted just so the letter Z could be included in our alphabet And many words seem not to have much more significance than that But there are whole regiments of words right on this page in this column or in any reading matter that comes before your eye that have a history, a tradition or a custom hidden behind them

Take a word occasionally and dig into it It is a goodly game and you'll lose nothing by the knowledge you acquire

BOTTLE TIME



Dave Ordway finds love and adventure when his plane crashes in the orange groves owned by beautiful Joan Marbury. He loves Joan but her reserve is impenetrable. Her cousin, Sally, however, is obviously in love with Dave. Gerry Flemming, Talbot Henderson and Barbara Holworthy, Dave's former fiancee, visit him. Barbara is hostile toward the girls. Under cover of darkness, Dave leaves, with Gerry and Talbot, to even a score against Mueller, neighboring plantation owner, who, in reality, is Snatch Cazzoni, a bootlegger. Mueller tried to force his attentions upon Joan and also robbed Dave and destroyed his plane. Planning to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's, the boys come upon a hangar containing four planes, and also discover a liquor-cutting plant. Figures loom in the darkness. Dave grapples with the nearest one. It is Joan. Unable to resist, they kiss. Heedless of danger, the girls had followed but are ordered back. On the way, Barbara, in revenge, pretends to hear Dave calling Joan. Joan goes back in search of him accompanied only by her colored mammy. Mueller finds them.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"WHY, hello, sweetie!"

Joan's blood chilled at the sound of Mueller's voice. A hand appeared in the searing light, seized her wrist and dragged her from the closet.

"Where's your swell boy friends now?" he mocked.

The searchlight swivelled away. The gunman who had been standing beside his chief stepped aside Joan could now see Mueller's swarthy face. There were glistening drops of sweat on his forehead and on his upper lip. His mouth was drawn back into a tight-lipped grin. His beady eyes squinted down into hers

"They left you alone with the old nigger while they went on the run, yeah?" he gloated "That's the way with them dudes. Yellow."

His arm crawled around her waist, drew her close to his chest. She pushed against him but his muscles were like steel. She kicked at his legs, but he only jogged

Generous Offer.

"What's the idea, sweetie?" he panted. "You're going to be nice to me and I'm going to make it up to you. You can have anything you want. I'm rich, see?"

"If you don't let me alone," Joan gasped, "Mr. Ordway will come and get you."

"Oh, so you're sweet on that bum, eh?" he scoffed. "He can't even hold that greeneyed [illegible] can't. She gave him the [illegible] Ain't you got the nerve to kick me out in your dining room? Don't waste time on a guy like that baby. You and me'll get along fine."

Joan was a close [illegible] and from the garage of the floor. Hannah sprang forward [illegible] threw herself [illegible] with a cry [illegible] more at Mueller than human. He staggered and cursed.

"Get away from me, you black [illegible]" he yelled.

Hannah wonderful arms rose [illegible] body. She began [illegible] to her feet, using [illegible] for leverage to haul her tremendous weight upright. Mueller hammered down at her face with his clenched fist, screaming obscenities at her.

"You enta gwine hurt mah baby!" Hannah panted, still clawing her way to her feet.

The other gunman leaped at her, grabbing a handful of her black hair and trying to jerk her away from Mueller. Joan, who had raced toward the door, stopped abruptly, turned, and was at the two men like a silent fury. She placed her two hands around the guard's face and clawed with her fingernails, trying to reach his eyes.

Hannah fell heavily. The guard, twisting away from Joan's tearing hands, spun around on his heel, stepped forward and kicked Hannah in the stomach. Mueller grasped Joan's wrists and held them helpless. The guard kicked Hannah again. The negress screamed, pushed herself to her feet and shambled out of the room at a weird half-trot, waving her black fists wildly about her head.

Mueller swung Joan around to face him.

"Come on, you little spit-fire," he panted, "you'll be going with me, now."

Futile Resistance.

"I won't go with you," Joan sobbed. "Mr. Ordway is coming and he'll tear you into little pieces."

"Oh, yeah?" he sneered. "Well, let him come. I been aching to bounce him off ever since I first seen him. But you're going along with me, baby, whether you want to or not. By the time I get through with you, you'll listen to reason, see? And if your dude friend is coming, he'll have to be coming pronto, see, because you and me are going to go where he can't sic the bulls on us. We're going to take a nice little plane ride."

He stooped swiftly. His arms went around her waist. She clawed at him with her hands, but he pressed his sweaty face into her shoulder, protecting it from her sharp nails.

"Flash that light on the stairs, Pete," he grunted. "When we get outside you lam ahead and tell Sime to crank up the amphibian and be ready to get away in a heck of a hurry."

* * *

The lamp-lit hospitality of the old plantation house beckoned genially to Talbot. Sally and Barbara as they left the Ford beside the road and walked slowly across the lawn.

"I don't blame you at all for loving this place, Miss Sally," said Talbot, gazing from the windows. "After coming back from those abandoned houses, this seems like a haven of refuge"

"But I don't love it," declared Sally, vehemently "I hate it. every bit of it I wish it would burn down I wish I could never see it again in all my life"

Talbot looked at her thoughtfully, then at Barbara But Barbara's face was averted If she had been listening, she made no sign

"You've been under a strain, Sally," Talbot said gently "Everything will be all right now When we know that Dave has made a getaway in one of the planes, we'll all come over to St Petersburg and take a little cruise while the police get to work making a Christian out of Mueller They'll drive him out of the State"

"I wish he'd take me with him!" Sally burst out.

"If you really hate the place as badly as that," said Talbot, with a seriousness that was new to him, "I don't see why something couldn't be done about it. I—"

"Why do you suppose Gerry doesn't come?" interrupted Barbara, restlessly.

She whirled a porch chair around to face the road and dropped herself into it, lighting a cigarette with trembling hands.

"He's probably waiting for Dave," shrugged Talbot, abstractedly, his mild blue eyes fixed upon Sally's lovely profile, sharply etched against the lighted window. "What you need, Sally," he resumed, "is a little vacation. You ought to get away from here for a while."

She stared at him through the darkness.

"You don't understand," she said, simply. "Joan and I haven't enough money to go anywhere—anywhere! We won't even be able to buy a new frock apiece until our fruit goes to the packing house. With next year's crop we may be able to pay off some more of the mortgage. The year after that we may be able to sell the plantation, if the banks have stopped going bankrupt and the fruit fly doesn't come into this section and the market in Wall Street goes up so that people have money to spend."

"Gerry ought to be here by now," Barbara complained petulantly.

She flicked her quarter-consumed cigarette out into the darkness and began to pace back and forth across the wide verandah Then, abruptly, she went into the house, slamming the screen door behind her.

Guilty Conscience.

"Poor old Babs," chuckled Talbot. "She has the shakes. Too much exercise, I guess, and the strain of dressing for dinner without two or three maids to hand her things"

"It isn't that," said Sally, not unkindly. "Those terrible houses at Cathay are enough to upset her They gave me the creeps, too. Oh, Talbot, I wish you could have seen this place before the boom ended it was lovely. I didn't hate it then. It was the most beautiful place in the world."

"All it needs," said Talbot, slowly, "are a few decent people around and a few houses that are living instead of dead There's a fascination about it that even I can feel, and I'll confess that I'm one of those birds who take pretty kindly to luxury and civilization A little money would take most of the rough edges off this country Open up and repair some of those houses at Cathay, get a few cars running loose around the road and you'd have a different country here

Barbara appeared at the screen door

"Did I hear Gerry's car?" she demanded tensely

"Not yet," said Sally, wondering at the girl's ill-concealed nervousness

Barbara scratched a match against the screening. The fragile stick snapped under the pressure Impatiently she opened the door and threw the unlighted cigarette out on to the lawn. She turned back into the house.

Theaters

AT THE CLIFTONA

Greystoke, the worlds greatest magician, and his animal company, have been held over by Harry E. Clifton, manager of the Cliftona theater, and after pleasing performances Wednesday and Thursday, will be here Friday and Saturday.

The performance is reported one of the finest ever shown.

One of the most spectacular and thrilling stampedes in screen history was staged for "The Conquering Horde," outdoors classic starring Richard Arlen and featuring Fay Wray, which comes to the Cliftona Theater on Friday

Paramount executives went to great expense to round up a herd of hundreds of beef cattle for the big scene of the stampede which forms an important chapter in the story.

AT THE GRAND

A love triangle in which a railroad engineer, his wife and his fireman figure is the theme of "Other Men's Women," spectacular screen melodrama which Warner Brothers are now offering at the Grand Theatre with Grant Withers, Mary Astor and Regis Toomey in the leading roles.

All the colorful background of action and adventure that has made railroading the center of so much of the nation's romance is caught with accuracy in "Other Men's Women." The loves and hates of the men who drive the engines, is vividly portraved.

J. Farrell Macdonald, Fred Kohler Joan Blondell, James Cagney and Walter Long are in the cast. William Wellman directed.

THE BEDFORD GARDENS

WESTPORT, Conn.—The Bedford gardens, for several generations a place of pilgrimage, will be maintained for the public. The late E. T. Bedford, Standard Oil official, made provision in his will, filed here, to maintain the great gardens and lodges connected therewith for benefit of the public The establishment is one of the most elaborate in the country.

FOR CLASSIFIED readers a little money goes a long way.

Any member of the family of F. B. Brunner, 317 S. Court-st, is invited to be a guest of The Herald to the Grand Theatre. Call at this office for ticket.

Pneumonia Invited by Neglect and Exposure

To Go to Work with a Fever or Heavy Cold Is to Tempt Serious Illness, Warns Authority, for with Lowered Resistance Germs Quickly Multiply

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ALL your life you have been told "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This is particularly the case as regards the so-called minor infections.

It is far wiser to take immediate care of a simple cold or cough than to run any unnecessary risks through neglect. It is unfortunate that most people do not pay enough attention to the common cold. This is true, too, of bronchitis and sore throat.

Dr. Copeland.

Usually these infections, even if they are mild in their symptoms, are associated with the "pneumococci," the germs of pneumonia. They are always on watch to pounce on a person run down in health.

Persons suffering from severe cough, or any other respiratory difficulty, should go to bed. If there is temperature, this precaution becomes imperative.

Going to work with a fever is a foolish and dangerous practice. Exposure to cold, over exertion and fatigue under such circumstances are likely to result in serious complications

Pneumonia is an infection which may be spread from man to man through the secretions of the nose and mouth. On this account, it is important that all cases of pneumonia be carefully isolated. This can be accomplished at home, but it is far easier to care for such cases at a hospital where all modern facilities are available.

This disease is most fatal in the aged and young. On this account, extreme precautions must be taken for their protection.

Cold wetting and chilling must be avoided. Undue exposure, over exposure, lack of sleep and undernourishment help to lay a foundation for this disease With efforts at avoiding these disturbing factors, the frequency of this disease will be decreased.

Do not forget that neglect of the common ailments, particularly in the very young and old, may really be the chief cause of pneumonia. Indeed, it will be wise to use the ounce of prevention.

Another Wickersham Dud

FOR the reason they contained nothing not already generally known, the latest findings of the Wickersham crime commission have attracted little public attention. They were not controversial in nature, nor did they suggest workable remedies for the conditions cited.

Emphasis was placed in the part politics plays in the selection of federal and state prosecuting attorneys, but the facts are not new. The people have known them for years and have seemed to be indifferent save when some scandal more serious or sensational than usual has exaggerated the real state of affairs.

The commission sees much evil in the fact that the prosecutor's office, "with its enormous power of preventing prosecutions from getting to trial, its lack of organization, its freedom from central control and its ill-defined responsibilities," is a great polotical prize.

Perhaps in the large cities conditions are as bad as the commission charges, but few persons will believe that prosecuting attorneys in the smaller counties and the more rural federal districts free many offenders for political reasons. It is true that only 4.7 percent of the felony cases in New York and Chicago reach a jury, but the commission certainly does not impute to the political machinations of prosecuting attorneys the dismissal of the other 95.3 per cent.

The district attorneyship is a political prize only where there is government for and by the bootleggers. Where the racketeers control the office they can ply their illegitimate trade with immunity from penal punishment for themselves and with the assurance that their competitors will be "justly dealt with according to law."

Business and Sentiment

ACCORDING to a popular notion 'there is no sentiment in business" because, like oil and water, sentiment and business will not mix. But there is, nevertheless a great deal of sentiment in business. You may recognize the truth of this by observing people's reactions to news of business failures.

Genuine sympathy is felt for the honest man compelled to go into bankruptcy. Such a one has friends eager to help him out of his trouble. Often they extend his credit, accept settlements that leave him in a position to make a fresh start and contribute as they can toward the success of the new start. Knowing him to be honest, his equally honest fellows recognize him as an asset to the business world. There is always real rejoicing at the "come back" of an honest man and not merely because his triumphing over adversity means that he will pay off old scores.

There is nothing more pathetic than an honest business failure. On the other hand, what is more despicable than a failure brought about by dishonest practices and leaving a train of despoiled victims with confidence in their fellows shattered? This sort of failure does more harm than can be calculated from any statement of losses sustained by those who put trust in the untrustworthy. It hurts honest people. For public protection there should be no mercy extended to those who make dishonest failures.

Digging Into Words

IF you just sit and look at one printed word for a little while it will seem to jump at you and the real peculiarity of its pronunciation, its meaning and its fitness will be impressed on your mind as never before. Plate, leather, leaf, dance—why were those words chosen to mean exactly what they do mean?

Of course, when we were children, we used to be told that the word zebra was invented just so the letter Z could be included in our alphabet. And many words seem not to have much more significance than that. But there are whole regiments of words, right on this page, in this column, or in any reading matter, that comes before your eye, that have a history, a tradition or a custom hidden behind them.

Take a word occasionally and dig into it. It is a goodly game, and you'll lose nothing by the knowledge you acquire.

BOTTLE TIME

"A KNIGHT COMES FLYING"

Dave Ordway finds love and adventure when his plane crashes in the orange groves owned by beautiful Joan Marbury. He loves Joan but her reserve is impenetrable. Her cousin, Sally, however, is obviously in love with Dave. Gerry Flemming, Talbot Henderson and Barbara Holworthy, Dave's former fiancee, visit him. Barbara is hostile toward the girls. Under cover of darkness, Dave leaves, with Gerry and Talbot, to even a score against Mueller, neighboring plantation owner, who, in reality, is Snatch Cazzoni, a bootlegger. Mueller tried to force his attentions upon Joan and also robbed Dave and destroyed his plane. Planning to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's, the boys come upon a hangar containing four planes, and also discover a liquor-cutting plant. Figures loom in the darkness. Dave grapples with the nearest one. It is Joan. Unable to resist, they kiss. Heedless of danger, the girls had followed but are ordered back. On the way, Barbara, in revenge, pretends to hear Dave calling Joan. Joan goes back in search of him accompanied only by her colored mammy. Mueller finds them.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"WHY, hello, sweetie!"

Joan's blood chilled at the sound of Mueller's voice. A hand appeared in the searing light, seized her wrist and dragged her from the closet.

"Where's your swell boy friends now?" he mocked.

The searchlight swivelled away. The gunman who had been standing beside his chief stepped aside. Joan could now see Mueller's swarthy face. There were glistening drops of sweat on his forehead and on his upper lip. His mouth was drawn back into a tight-lipped grin. His beady eyes squinted down into hers.

"They left you alone with the old nigger while they went on the lam, yeah?" he gloated. "That's the way with them dudes. Yellow."

His arm crawled around her wrist, drew her close to his chest. She pushed against him but his muscles were like steel. She kicked at his legs, but he only laughed.

Generous Offer.

"What's the idea, sweetie?" he panted. "You're going to be nice to me and I'm going to make it up to you, see? You can have anything you want. I'm rich, see?"

"If you don't let me alone," Joan gasped, "Mr. Ordway will come and kill you!"

"Oh, so you're sweet on that punk, yeah?" he scoffed. "He can't even hold that green-eyed broad, he can't. She give him the air, didn't she? And didn't you see the come-on look she give me in your dining room? Don't waste your time on a guy like that baby. You and me'll get along fine."

There was a queer scrambling sound from the darkness of the floor. Hannah, plunging forward on her hands and knees, threw herself at Mueller's legs with a cry that was more animal-like than human. He staggered and cursed.

"Get away from me, you black hell-cat!" he yelled.

Hannah's ponderous arms rose and encircled his body. She began to pull herself to her feet, using his writhing torso for leverage to haul her tremendous weight upright. Mueller hammered down at her face with his clenched fist, screaming obscenities at her.

"You enta gwine hurt mah baby!" Hannah panted, still clawing her way to her feet.

The other gunman leaped at her, grabbing a handful of her black hair and trying to jerk her away from Mueller. Joan, who had raced toward the door, stopped abruptly, turned, and was at the two men like a silent fury. She placed her two hands around the guard's face and clawed with her fingernails, trying to reach his eyes.

Hannah fell heavily. The guard, twisting away from Joan's tearing hands, spun around on his heel, stepped forward and kicked Hannah in the stomach. Mueller grasped Joan's wrists and held them helpless. The guard kicked Hannah again. The negress screamed, pushed herself to her feet and shambled out of the room at a weird half-trot, waving her black fists wildly about her head.

Mueller swung Joan around to face him.

"Come on, you little spit-fire," he panted, "you'll be going with me, now."

Futile Resistance.

"I won't go with you," Joan sobbed. "Mr. Ordway is coming and he'll tear you into little pieces."

"Oh, yeah?" he sneered. "Well, let him come. I been aching to bounce him off ever since I first seen him. But you're going along with me, baby, whether you want to or not. By the time I get through with you, you'll listen to reason, see? And if your dude friend is coming, he'll have to be coming pronto, see, because you and me are going to go where he can't sic the bulls on us. We're going to take a nice little plane ride."

He stooped swiftly. His arms went around her waist. She clawed at him with her hands, but he pressed his sweaty face into her shoulder, protecting it from her sharp nails.

"Flash that light on the stairs, Pete," he grunted. "When we get outside you lam ahead and tell Sime to crank up the amphibian and be ready to get away in a heck of a hurry."

* * *

The lamp-lit hospitality of the old plantation house beckoned genially to Talbot, Sally and Barbara as they left the Ford beside the road and walked slowly across the lawn.

"I don't blame you at all for loving this place, Miss Sally," said Talbot, gazing from the windows. "After coming back from those abandoned houses, this seems like a haven of refuge."

"But I don't love it," declared Sally, vehemently. "I hate it, every bit of it. I wish it would burn down. I wish I could never see it again in all my life!"

Talbot looked at her thoughtfully, then at Barbara. But Barbara's face was averted. If she had been listening, she made no sign.

"You've been under a strain, Sally," Talbot said gently. "Everything will be all right now. When we know that Dave has made a getaway in one of the planes, we'll all drive over to St. Petersburg and take a little cruise while the police get to work making a Christian out of Mueller. They'll drive him out of the State."

"I wish he'd take me with him!" Sally burst out.

"If you really hate the place as badly as that," said Talbot, with a seriousness that was new to him, "I don't see why something couldn't be done about it. I—"

"Why do you suppose Gerry doesn't come?" interrupted Barbara, restlessly.

She whirled a porch chair around to face the road and dropped herself into it, lighting a cigarette with trembling hands.

"He's probably waiting for Dave," shrugged Talbot, abstractedly, his mild blue eyes fixed upon Sally's lovely profile, sharply etched against the lighted window. "What you need, Sally," he resumed, "is a little vacation. You ought to get away from here for a while."

She stared at him through the darkness.

"You don't understand," she said, simply. "Joan and I haven't enough money to go anywhere—anywhere! We won't even be able to buy a new frock apiece until our fruit goes to the packing house. With next year's crop we may be able to pay off some more of the mortgage. The year after that we may be able to sell the plantation, if the banks have stopped going bankrupt and the fruit fly doesn't come into this section and the market in Wall Street goes up so that people have money to spend."

"Gerry ought to be here by now," Barbara complained petulantly.

She flicked her quarter-consumed cigarette out into the darkness and began to pace back and forth across the wide verandah. Then, abruptly, she went into the house, slamming the screen door behind her.

Guilty Conscience.

"Poor old Babs," chuckled Talbot. "She has the shakes. Too much exercise, I guess, and the strain of dressing for dinner without two or three maids to hand her things."

"It isn't that," said Sally, not unkindly. "Those terrible houses at Cathay are enough to upset her. They gave me the creeps, too. Oh, Talbot, I wish you could have seen this place before the boom ended. It was lovely. I didn't hate it then. It was the most beautiful place in the world."

"All it needs," said Talbot, slowly, "are a few decent people around and a few houses that are living instead of dead. There's a fascination about it that even I can feel, and I'll confess that I'm one of those birds who take pretty kindly to luxury and civilization. A little money would take most of the rough edges off this country. Open up and repair some of those houses at Cathay, get a few cars running loose around the road and you'd have a different country here."

Barbara appeared at the screen door.

"Did I hear Gerry's car?" she demanded tensely.

"Not yet," said Sally, wondering at the girl's ill-concealed nervousness.

Barbara scratched a match against the screening. The fragile stick snapped under the pressure. Impatiently she opened the door and threw the unlighted cigarette out on to the lawn. She turned back into the house.

Theaters

AT THE CLIFTONA

Greystoke, the worlds greatest magician, and his animal company, have been held over by Harry E. Clifton, manager of the Cliftona theater, and after pleasing performances Wednesday and Thursday, will be here Friday and Saturday.

The performance is reported one of the finest ever shown.

One of the most spectacular and thrilling stampedes in screen history was staged for "The Conquering Horde," outdoors classic starring Richard Arlen and featuring Fay Wray, which comes to the Cliftona Theater on Friday.

Paramount executives went to great expense to round up a herd of hundreds of beef cattle for the big scene of the stampede which forms an important chapter in the story.

AT THE GRAND

A love triangle in which a railroad engineer, his wife and his fireman figure is the theme of "Other Men's Women," spectacular screen melodrama which Warner Brothers are now offering at the Grand Theatre with Grant Withers, Mary Astor and Regis Toomey in the leading roles.

All the colorful background of action and adventure that has made railroading the center of so much of the nation's romance is caught with accuracy in "Other Men's Women." The loves and hates of the men who drive the engines, is vividly portraved.

J. Farrell Macdonald, Fred Kohler Joan Blondell, James Cagney and Walter Long are in the cast. William Wellman directed.

THE BEDFORD GARDENS

WESTPORT, Conn.—The Bedford gardens, for several generations a place of pilgrimage, will be maintained for the public. The late E. T. Bedford, Standard Oil official, made provision in his will, filed here, to maintain the great gardens and lodges connected therewith for benefit of the public. The establishment is one of the most elaborate in the country.

Pneumonia Invited by Neglect and Exposure

To Go to Work with a Fever or Heavy Cold Is to Tempt Serious Illness, Warns Authority, for with Lowered Resistance Germs Quickly Multiply

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ALL your life you have been told "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This is particularly the case as regards the so-called minor infections.

It is far wiser to take immediate care of a simple cold or cough than to run any unnecessary risks through neglect. It is unfortunate that most people do not pay enough attention to the common cold. This is true, too, of bronchitis and sore throat.

Dr. Copeland.

Usually these infections, even if they are mild in their symptoms, are associated with the "pneumococci," the germs of pneumonia. They are always on watch to pounce on a person run down in health.

Persons suffering from severe cough, or any other respiratory difficulty, should go to bed. If there is temperature, this precaution becomes imperative.

Going to work with a fever is a foolish and dangerous practice. Exposure to cold, over exertion and fatigue under such circumstances are likely to result in serious complications.

Pneumonia is an infection which may be spread from man to man through the secretions of the nose and mouth. On this account, it is important that all cases of pneumonia be carefully isolated. This can be accomplished at home, but it is far easier to care for such cases at a hospital where all modern facilities are available.

This disease is most fatal in the aged and young. On this account, extreme precautions must be taken for their protection.

Cold, wetting and chilling must be avoided. Undue exposure, over exposure, lack of sleep and undernourishment help to lay a foundation for this disease. With efforts at avoiding these disturbing factors, the frequency of this disease will be decreased.

Do not forget that neglect of the common ailments, particularly in the very young and old, may really be the chief cause of pneumonia. Indeed, it will be wise to use the ounce of prevention.

Tariff Measure Now a Year Old

COLUMBUS.—The birthday anniversary of a year-old infant, coinciding with the trip of President Herbert Hoover to Marion, Ohio, and to Indiana and Illinois this week, served to center attention upon one major issue of the next presidential campaign, to the great annoyance of the Washington administration. The baby was the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill.

As the president addresses his countrymen, sensed public opinion, conferred with Republican leaders, newspapers noted that the tariff measure he had signed had been in effect a year June 17, condemned it as a contributing factor in the economic depression.

Said the independent Scripps-Howard newspapers which in 1928 editorially supported the Hoover candidacy:

"The president's announcement in his Indianapolis address that he proposes to go ahead with the existing tariff policy is the most depressing news we have heard in a year of depression. With most economist and increasing numbers of business leaders, we believe that full prosperity cannot be recaptured until the tariff is reduced.

"But, though Mr. Hoover's opposition to tariff revision can retard business recovery for a time, there is reason to think that the economic arguments for a lower tariff to revive foreign trade and reopen American factories, will be effective in the next Congress.

"Time has proved that Mr. Hoover was mistaken on every point in the predictions he made a year ago. The country could forgive him for being mistaken, but hardly for refusing to recognize his mistake and to take steps to correct the error. It is no longer a question of opinion as to what the tariff will do the country, but a matter of plain fact as to what the tariff has done to the country.

"The tariff has not been taken away from politics. It has become a major political issue for the first time since William Howard Taft similarly defied public opinion and economic law."

The good Dr. Simeon Fess, senator from Ohio and chairman of the G. O. P. national committee, likewise felt the barbs of editorial criticism as he watched Ohio's reaction to the presidential visit. In the independent Cleveland Plain Dealer he read:

"If whoops were votes and Simeon Fess a prophet the election of 1932 would now be in the Republican bag, sewed up and ready for delivery.

"Under Fessian influence a rally of young Republicans has been staged in Washington.

"The fight goes on after the chear leaders yell themselves hoarse and retire to nurse their weary throat and shoulder muscles. The rose-hued glasses through which Fess and the associate optimists view the landscape tlot out the imperfections of the road ahead. Their wearers see nothing of the widespread hostility toward an indefensible tariff law; they see nothing of the distresses of agriculture promised relief if Mr. Hoover won in 1928; nothing of the fiasco of the Farm Board; nothing of the popular awakening to the old-time nonsense that linked prosperity with Republican success.

"Against Simeon D. Fess as a prophet, however, Ohio warns all and sundry. His imagination is riotous."

And The Lebanon Patriot remarked:

"Ohio is a Hoover State' said Dr. Fess, Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

According to the Fess system of logic, this must be the reason why Ohio elected a Democratic Governor, a Democratic United States Senator and six additional Democratic Congressmen, all by overwhelming majorities, last fall."

Democrats, paying respectful attention to the President, saw nothing to disturb their satisfaction over the fact that national political commentators continue to discuss Ohio presidential and vice presidential possibilities. To the speculation the St. Clairsville Gazette added this editorial observation.

"Governor White is making a good governor and is contending with matters no other Ohio executive has ever had to meet. He is not shirking, but is meeting these problems and weighing each with a care and study that is meeting with the approval of the people regardless of party. A continuance of such a policy is bound to make him one of the leading contenders of the Presidential nomination."

KANSAS WHEAT CROP IS SURE TO PASS 1914

180,000,000 Bushels Poured Into World From This State Then.

By WALT MALONE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WICHITA, Kas. — With the Grain Stabilization Corporation attitude toward the wheat pits over the country conversation in this part of Kansas has turned to the possible price and the probable yield of wheat fields in the state.

It has been estimated by those conversant with the crop conditions over the entire wheat belt that Kansas will find itself with the largest yield of wheat in several years, some predicting that it will equal if not exceed the yield of 1914 when 180,000,000 bushels were poured into the markets of the world.

County farm agents, who have made a specialized local study of crop conditions, and railroad agricultural agents are unanimous in predicting that the crops should run from fifteen to twenty-five bushels to the acre, depending on the section of the state in which the fields are located.

Railroads are moving all available empty box cars to the wheat belt to care for the shipments of grain that are certain to be made when the harvest starts within a few weeks.

As to price, observers are not so optimistic. Immediately following the withdrawal of the support of the Grain Stabilization Corporation, wheat dropped to the lower 50's in Kansas City, the center of the grain activities in the Middle West.

The price began a steady climb of a fraction of a cent a day until it has reached the upper 50's, where it is expected to remain. Many predict that, with the new crop thrown on the market in such quantities as it is reasonable to expect with the acreage of standing grain, the price will drop into the 40's. However, the predictions are discredited by most of the wheat growers.

Binders are now going into the fields in the southern part of the state and the combines will follow, in the same section, within a few days.

Wheat growers have informed labor agencies over the country that there would be no need for any influx of laborers to care for the crop, the combine having eliminated the necessity for large numbers of workers.

CHURCH GROUP ENDS SESSION

Dr. Clippinger, Westerville, Re-elected President of Ohio Council.

COLUMBUS, O., June 19—Convinced that teachers in Sunday schools need more training, and with a new slate of officers elected, the Ohio Council of Religious Education today prepared to bring its annual meeting to a close.

Loud applause greeted Dr. Charles Brewbaker of Dayton, superintendent of evangelism in the United Brethern church, when he urged the council to take steps to train its Sunday school teachers.

"Lack of knowledge of the Bible is alarmingly prevalent among the teachers," he declared.

Dr. W. G. Clippinger of Westerville, was reelected president of the council. Rev. I. N. DePug of Dayton, was selected vice president to succeed Rev. A. Stokes Watson of Zanesville.

Other officers elected were: Vice presidents, Rev. J. Harry Prather of Ashland, C. F. Kennedy of Van Wert, E. J. Brookhart of Celina, W. L. Richards of West Union, E. C. Eikenberry of Camden, and Charles H. Lewis of Columbus; treasurer; Ralph M. Lucas of Columbus, and secretary, Wilson A. Holmes of Granville.

All Three Sides Discuss Vanderbilt-Arno Fight

RENO, Nev.—"Regrettable and unfortunate," said Mrs. Mary Vanderbilt.

"False and absurd," declared Peter Arno.

"Terribly sorry! I really have nothng to say," added Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

Thus, the principals expressed themselves today on the assertion of Samuel Platt, attorney for Vanderbilt, that the author of "Reno" and scion of the famous Vanderbilt family, because of alleged attions to Mrs. Vanderbilt, had "gone gunning" for Arno, whose cartoons amuse New Yorkers.

Simultaneously, Police Chief J. M. Kirkley admitted Arno had requested police protection because of alleged threats from Vanderbilt.

According to the version of the affair given by Platt, Vanderbilt, incensed because Arno had escorted Mrs. Vanderbilt home from a party Sunday night, seized a gun and started down the street after Arno. Vanderbilt was impeded by a lame foot, his attorney said, and realizing the unfortunate position in which he was placing himself, retraced his steps to his home where upon examing the gun he found it was not loaded.

"Reports of gun play and of my so-called attentions to Mrs. Vanderbilt are absolutely false," Arno said in the presence of his attorney Clyde Souter. He declined to talk except with Souter present.

"I am surprised if Mr. Vanderbilt became angry about anything I have done. We have been friends for nearly five years and I think this whole matter is absurd. I know nothing about the marital affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt and that is none of my affair."

Arno declined to discuss the Sunday evening dinner party following which the episode took place.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was located at the California-ave home of Mr. and Mrs. True Vencill, prominent in the younger social set of Reno.

"The entire affair is regrettable and unfortunate," she said. "I really don't want to talk about it at all.

"I am upset over the affair but I am sure it is just a foolish incident that will pass quickly."

Asked concerning a possible rift between herself and her husband, she repeated:

"It's all foolishness and there is really nothing serious about it."

Pressed for further details she said firmly:

"I really don't want to say another word."

Vanderbilt was located at the Riverside hotel where he is apparently staying at present.

"I am terribly sorry, I really have nothing to say," he responded politely and pleasantly to all questions concerning the affair.

He would not confirm reports that he had attended the Sunday evening dinner affair nor discuss for that matter any of the circumstances involved in the case.

Attorney Platt who represents Vanderbilt had not been so reticent.

"Mr. Vanderbilt had brooded over persistent attentions paid Mrs. Vanderbilt by Arno," he said. "When he saw Mrs. Vanderbilt arrive home in a car escorted by Arno shortly after midnight Monday he became angered, seized his gun and ran into the street. He followed Arno a short distance down the street, then realizing what the situation was leading to, returned to his home. The joke of the affair was that upon returning home he discovered the gun was not loaded."

Vanderbilt was impeded by a lame foot, his attorney said, and realizing the unfortunate position in which he was placing himself, retraced his steps to his home where upon examing the gun he found it was not loaded.

"Reports of gun play and of my so-called attentions to Mrs. Vanderbilt are absolutely false," Arno said in the presence of his attorney Clyde Souter. He declined to talk except with Souter present.

"I am surprised if Mr. Vanderbilt became angry about anything I have done. We have been friends for nearly five years and I think this whole matter is absurd. I know nothing about the marital affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt and that is none of my affair."

Arno declined to discuss the Sunday evening dinner party following which the episode took place.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was located at the California-ave home of Mr. and Mrs. True Vencill, prominent in the younger social set of Reno.

"The entire affair is regrettable and unfortunate," she said. "I really don't want to talk about it at all.

"I am upset over the affair but I am sure it is just a foolish incident that will pass quickly."

Asked concerning a possible rift between herself and her husband, she repeated:

"It's all foolishness and there is really nothing serious about it."

Pressed for further details she said firmly:

"I really don't want to say another word."

Vanderbilt was located at the Riverside hotel where he is apparently staying at present.

"I am terribly sorry, I really have nothing to say," he responded politely and pleasantly to all questions concerning the affair.

He would not confirm reports that he had attended the Sunday evening dinner affair nor discuss for that matter any of the circumstances involved in the case.

Attorney Platt who represents Vanderbilt had not been so reticent.

"Mr. Vanderbilt had brooded over persistent attentions paid Mrs. Vanderbilt by Arno," he said. "When he saw Mrs. Vanderbilt arrive home in a car escorted by Arno shortly after midnight Monday he became angered, seized his gun and ran into the street. He followed Arno a short distance down the street, then realizing what the situation was leading to, returned to his home. The joke of the affair was that upon returning home he discovered the gun was not loaded."

been here the required length of time, his expected divorce suit against Lois Long, New York author, has not yet been filed.

The cartoonist lives in a small but fashionable Spanish style house on Circle Drive, one of the elite sections of the divorce colony, not more than a stone's throw from the back yard of the Vanderbilt home.

REPLACE FOREIGN PILOTS

MEXICO CITY.—Mexican pilots will shortly replace foreign fliers on passenger planes operating in this country, according to an understanding reached between the government and commercial flight companies. The Mexican pilots to be drawn largely from the army aviation branch, must undergo a rigid training period before receiving commercial licenses.

WOMAN HURT BY 4-TRAP

EAST HAMPTON, Conn.—Figure-4 traps hidden in woodland are proving a menace to casual wanderers. Mrs. Albin Olsen recently went into a woodlot on her farm here, and was trapped. Fortunately the great stone that is supposed to kill a small animal merely sprained her right foot. The trap was used illegally.

HERO ONLY ASKED A JOB

MIDDLETWON, Conn.—Salvatore Bonauito, 17, went into Crystal lake here on Memorial day and saved a woman and four children from drowning. Two days later a city official located the youth and asked him a few questions. One was: "Would you like a Carnegie medal for what you did?" "Oh no," replied the boy. "All I want is a job."

BLOOD-THIRSTY INDIANS SCALP IND. GROCERS WITH 23 SCORE

Eddie Watson and String of Other Hurlers Touched For 25 Wallops, Two Going For the Circuit, One With Paths Filled; Plenty of Comedy Features Encounter.

Socking Eddie Watson and about four other hurlers for 25 base hits, the Red Men went on the warpath at Utilities field Thursday evening to score a 23-8 victory over the Circleville Oils' nearest opponents, the Independent Grocers.

Watson, Barnes, Kline and finally Robinson ascended the mound for the Grocers but all any of them could do was toss the ball then duck, for those Red Men didn't care who it was, the same dose was handed each. Two home runs, both clean ones, were added to the box score, one a mighty blow to center field by Cotty Radcliff with one on the paths, and the other a long line drive to the same place, although not quite so far, by Ray Smith, with the paths filled.

George Crum, pitching for his Red Men, tossed nice ball being in danger only once when the Grocers scored six runs in the second to take a momentary lead. He hurled shutout ball for six frames, then Smith who took the mound was touched for two runs in the ninth.

The Red Men scored four runs in the first frame but lost their lead when the Grocers counted six in the second. The Indians counted five in the third and five more in the fourth, one in the fifth, four in the sixth on Smith's base-cleaning home run sock, one in the eighth and two in the ninth.

Thompson, Radcliff and H. White each got four hits for the winners, and Bunk Radcliff playing his first game with the Red Men, counted three hits and was walked twice in six trips to the rubber.

Wallace hit three safely for the Grocers.

There is no game scheduled in the league this evening.

GIANTS ANNEX SIX STRAIGHT; CARDINALS WIN

Hubbell Returns To Form Against Pirates; Cubs, Robins Split.

By Les Conklin

NEW YORK, June 19—The New York Giants, latest big league outfit to go on a rampage in this dizzy season of streaks and slumps, had stretched their string of victories to six games today by opening their home stay with a 3 to 1 win over Pittsburgh. Before reforming they had dropped nine out of eleven.

John McGraw, manager of the Giants, was particulary jubilant today over yesterday's victory because Carl Hubbell, in holding the Pirates to six hits, demostrated that he has regained his brilliant from of last season. Earlier this year Hubbell had been as useless as a propellor on a lunch wagon, winning only two games out of six while all the other Giant hurlers stayed above the .500 mark.

The losing hurler was Larry French, the only Pirate twirler who had beaten the Giants this season, and he had done it twice Hubbell deserved a shutout, the one run scored off his being unearned

The Giants hope to dislodge St Louis from the lead during their long home stay but made no headway yesterday, as the Cards nosed out Boston, 5 to 4, and remained three games in front, the cards collected only five hits off Brandt and Haid but scored four runs in the seventh on one hit, bunched with three passes and two Boston errors. Hafey's homer in the eight gave the league leaders a winning margin.

As a result of dividing a twin bill with Brooklyn, the Cubs are two full games back of the Giants Dazzy Vance struck out eleven Bruins in the opener but was nicked for as many hits, including Hack Wilson's seventh homer of the season. The Robins bunched their blows effectively and won by a 7 to 5 count.

Pat Malone, Chicago's strikeout expert, was in rare form in the night cap and gave the Robins a neat coat of whitewash, 8 to 0, yielding only five hits Hornsby's homer in the sixth took the steam out of 'Dolf Lauqe and the Cubs shelled him off the hill.

Three Cincinnati pitchers-Ogden, Eckert and Carroll-suffered a severe attack of walkitis with the score knotted in the ninth and issued four straight passes which gave the game to the Phillies, 5 to 4. Don Hurst drove in Philadelphia's other four runs with a homer and a single.

American league clubs were not scheduled, the western teams in the junior loop opened home stands against the invading clubs from the east today.

Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks cost less to operate

CHEVROLET It is a matter of record, among more and more large fleet operators, that Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks give a lower transportation cost than any other truck of equal capacity in the market.

These firms are finding, through experience, that Chevrolet sedan deliveries are capable of 20 miles or better, to the gallon of gasoline; that Chevrolet 1½-ton trucks are making fuel records which are relatively just as high. That it costs very little to keep Chevrolet trucks in first-class working order. That Chevrolet service charges on both parts and labor are exceptionally low. That the active life of Chevrolet trucks extends well past the 50,000 mileage mark.

To place your hauling on a minimum-cost basis—and keep it there—put Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks to work. A wide variety of Chevrolet-built bodies is now available. And delivered prices of Chevrolet trucks, complete and ready for work, are based on low chassis-cost and low body-cost, plus only reasonable charges for handling and financing.

George E. Masters, publisher of the Yankton (S. Dak.) Press & Dakotan, says.

That advertising is really a sweet pull for merchants to take this year when they feel full of business aches and pains. And the best testimonial for skeptics to read is that from men and firms who consistently have been space users in newspapers and have increased profits to show for their efforts.

Indiscrimate expenditure for advertising of course, is to be avoided as much as lack of budget allowing for advertising. There are enough successful men and firms who can tell you the approximate amount necessary for advertising In one line the advertising budget might be only one per cent of the gross sales, in another three per cent, in still another five per cent

The advertising budget is as necessary as that for heat or for rent or for labor.

Communities, too, that have resources and advantages that point to growth should also realize that these "wares" must be advertised if they expect profitable returns from them They should, however, have a program for expansion, they should have leaders to carry out the program, they should expect to work if success is wanted

GREYSTOKE, THE MAGICIAN

On The Screen

As big as Texas! As thrill-full as gun-totin' ruffians and rough-ridin' ranchers can make it. A thousand times more exciting than the original novel. With a superb cast headed by RICHARD ARLEN and FAY WRAY. With over 200 supporting players. Thousands of head of cattle.

THRILLS!
